

Getting away from it all...

All the fun of family cruising

In crowded, bustling Britain, one of the few places to get away from it all is on the sea.

Peace and quiet. Just the hum of the wind in the rigging.

Freedom. Just the exuberance and sheer excitement of slicing through water; lazing along at cruising speed; steering through quiet creeks; mooring in peaceful harbours.

If you're a sailor already, you know this feeling. If you're not, there's a wealth of adventure awaiting you.

And what's to stop you?

Lack of experience? That's no drawback with a Westerly yacht.

Why Westerly yachts are superb for family cruising

They're easy to handle

Really experienced sailors enjoy sailing Westerlys. But the beauty of them is, you'll have no trouble handling one if you're out with an inexperienced crew. They'll soon learn the ropes. That's why Westerlys are real family boats. Everyone can participate: no-one gets left out of the fun. And they give you that feeling of confidence and security which is the basis of all enjoyment at sea.

Strong glass fibre hulls

For very good reasons, all Westerly yachts have glass fibre hulls. It's the longest-lasting material for boats of this size. And the most resistant to damage (it can't dent like metal, splinter like wood). So there won't be any large repairs. And glass fibre doesn't deteriorate. It can't rot or rust. And it is impervious to all marine borers. Another point: glass fibre gives much more usable space below decks.

Hardly any maintenance to do

Yet another good reason for glass fibre. There's no caulking, no scraping to be done. Just a coat of anti-fouling on the bottom twice a year. And you won't ever need to paint your Westerly. Westerlys have a mirror-gloss finish that no paint can match.

They're spacious, good looking

The type of boat you're proud to own – and others envy. Their beautiful, glass-smooth hulls (finished with Burma teak rubbing strips) make them look real beauties. Step aboard: you'll notice there's sufficient headroom in the cabin (rare in boats of this size). There's a wonderful impression of spaciousness. And fine attention to detail: comfortable sleeping berths; upholstered seats; plenty of shelf and hanging space; all fittings compact and cunningly stowed away; generous use of luxurious mahogany everywhere (features your wife will love). Westerly cabins have a charm not usually found in glass fibre boats.

Every Westerly has a Lloyd's Certificate

And they're not lightly given. What does it mean for you? That it's a good strong boat, because it has passed all the stringent tests Lloyd's subject it to. Only when a boat is built to Lloyd's standard can you really be sure of its strength of construction and seaworthiness.

Westerly service

Westerly are always pleased to help you with any problems which may arise, whether you are an experienced hand and want assurance on specific points, or whether you are new to boat-owning and might welcome advice on where you can keep your boat and where you can learn to sail her.

When can you have your Westerly?

Westerly boats are built by craftsmen who have spent years in traditional boat building methods. But unlike traditional methods, Westerly's advanced techniques in glass fibre construction result in speedier production of their craft. This means you can have your Westerly yacht sooner than a boat constructed of other materials – certainly on the date promised you.

You can take a Westerly anywhere

– she'll happily trail behind your car to where you want to go. And you can even live aboard her as you travel (fun for the children). Wonderful go-where-you-please feeling for get-away-from-it-all weekends with a Westerly!

Sail anywhere – moor anywhere

That's because of their twin-keels. A Westerly's draught is a great deal less than a keel boat – shallow enough to take her to places and moorings no deep-keel craft would dare to venture. Cruise anywhere. Up the Thames. On the Broads. Across Channel.

Safe, seaworthy, seakindly

Westerlys have cruised as far afield as Norway and Spain and the Eastern American Coast. They've been proved in all the varying sea conditions – and acclaimed by knowledgeable yachtsmen. The hull of a Westerly is so well balanced, that she will lie 'hove-to' with headsail backed for hours on end while you break for lunch. Its centre of buoyancy shifts neither forward nor aft when she is heeled over to 40°. This ensures a seakindly hull and contributes greatly to the crew's comfort in bad weather. Careful design on the drawing board can guarantee satisfactory performance at sea.

Life can be as relaxing at sea as it is in harbour.
